Mrs. Hubbard's Cupboards Saved!

(ENGLAND, 1960) — A famous house about to be torn down was saved. The house is where a children's poem was written long ago.

The poem was about Mrs. Hubbard. One day, she went to her cupboard to get a bone for her dog, but there weren't any bones in the cupboard. In fact, there wasn't any food in the entire house!

Mrs. Hubbard was a real person, not just a person from a poem. She was a cook and a housecleaner who lived more than 100 years ago.

Mrs. Hubbard's house is in England. It is a small house called a cottage. Over the years, the cottage started to fall apart. The roof leaked, the floors squeaked, and some of the walls started to crumble.

When it looked like the cottage would be torn down, people who remembered the poem decided to save it. They came up with a plan to repair it.

Today, the cottage is a tourist site. Visitors pay money to go inside and look around. The money is used to keep the cottage in good shape.
